On January 21, 1968 a B-52 Boeing Stratofortress, carrying four 1.1 megaton H-Bombs, caught fire and crashed in the Arctic Circle near Thule, Greenland. The Strategic Air Commands (SAC) Arctic Circle route was an airborne alert operation, referred to by the pilots of these large bombers as the Chrome Dome, and was a 24-hour round-the-clock strategic undertaking. Carrying four 1.1 megaton H-Bombs, the B-52s were ready on a moments notice to wage all-out warfare on an enemy that dare provoke an attack. The official response by the United States was that all four H-bombs were destroyed on impact but theorists have long maintained that one of the bombs survived the crash and lies on the seabed off Greenland near Thule Air Base. 34 years later, the lost bomb that America has always denied existed, has been found snagged by a fisherman's net setting off alarms deep in the bowels of the most fortified structure known to mankind the CIA. Although the United States is eager to avoid a crisis in relations with its NATO ally Denmark there...
