Excerpt: . . . has been the inhaling of irritating dust. The chicks are put into a burlap-covered box and airslaked lime dusted into the box. This starts coughing and sometimes the worms are coughed out. The dust irritates the tubes and lungs and may do more harm than good. Gapes and Earth Worms. The study of gapes leads me to believe that the com mon earth worm plays a part in the trouble. Given a case of gapes and the soil, as well as theeath worm, becomes infected. The chicks seek the worms, eat them, and in turn become the host of the gape worm. Many poultrymen write me that they feed earth woriris to their chicks and never have gapes. So do I, and I have never had a case of gapes on my place. Let me buy a few chicks with gapes, give them the...
