The so-called self-esteem movement—a progressive, child-centered, discovery model of schooling—has transformed schools into therapeutic clinics and teachers into counselors, creating a generation of entitled, righteous, underachieving children. An insiders account of the pernicious aspects of this seemingly well-meaning movement, The Feel-Good Curriculum provides devastating evidence that our belief in the power and importance of self-esteem in education is misplaced and without basis. Avoiding political posturing and political correctness, The Feel-Good Curriculum identifies the four specific effects of self-esteem's stranglehold on our schools—narcissism, emotivism, separatism, and cynicism. It prescribes antidotes to them—empathy, rationality and morality, connectedness, and skepticism—and offers a hopeful view of educational philosophy for the next millennium. Professor Stout urges us to replace our coddling, indulgent approach to building self-esteem in children with a sense of authentic self-confidence developed from intellectual, physical, and moral effort and achievement. This item ships from multiple locations. Your book may arrive from Roseburg, OR, La Vergne, TN. Paperback.
