Excerpt from book: SECT. II. pEGINHALD had fought his brother, and recounted all his interview with Ela. Greytill accused him of violence and turbulence, and urged the necessity of well-timed diffinition, of art, caution, and smooth addresses. The Monk was provoked at this assertion of superior wisdom, and, instead of retorting his reproof, displayed the stolen jewel, in silent and contemptuous triumph. Grey was too well versed in the arts of fraud and mischief, not to conceive at once, that this ring was to be used for deceiving the brethren of the monastery, or abusing Oswald, as occasions might require, by pretended orders and directions from the Countess. He viewed it eagerly, and regarded it, (not without reason) as an important instrument of his purposes, too important to be entrusted wholly to the violent hands of Reginwald. He commended his zeal and addresses, which, he confidently promised,...
