Excerpt: . in drawing from Hamilton that acknowledgment of his principles on which he was condemned. 1 he solemn summons of the dying martyr sunk so deeply into his mind, that, in a short time, he died distracted, and under the most awful apprehension of coming wrath. The martyrdom of Hamilton took place in the time of James V., but so far from stopping, it tended in no small degree to promote, the progress of gospel truth. The patience he showed when in the fire excited so great compassion, that many were persuaded of his innocence, and, in short, a general anxiety prevailed to be informed what the articles were for which he suffered, in consequence of which they became converts to his opinions. This was particularly the case in the universities, and many friars also, after this, began openly in their sermons to condemn...
