Excerpt: .is to-day the basis of the entire instruction in ornamentation. From that comes recognition of the necessity of supplementing the work on the drawingboard by work in materials, in order to arrive at more purposeful and realistic forms. This recognition has led to the establishment of school workshops (the need of which had been urged by Gottfried Semper in his first programme of industrial art education as early as 1851, and the establishment of which had repeatedly been called for in memorials by commissions of experts). The workshops have become, since then, an integral part of all Prussian industrial art and trade schools. They have extended and deepened their courses of study by adding the training of the hand; above all, they have exercised a perceptible influence upon the erection of new schoolbuildings, for in the old ones a combination of drafting rooms and workshops...
